MINISTER’S COLUMN

Easter Day. Only one reason known among men for the joyful Easter. Jesus Christ rose from the grave. The Jews did not know their Messiah, they thought Him an imposter. They were blind to miracles, blind to records, blind to prophecy, blind to evidences. So they crucified the fairest flower of the human race. Darkness immediately fell like a black pall over Jerusalem, tradition states it rained, a night black and terrible settled over the city of the great king. The light of human hope was snuffed out. The sob of a great loss, a defeat and despair covered the little land of the chosen people. They had destroyed their King. Their deed was one of a nation suicide from which they never recovered. Friday at the vesper hour Jesus died. Darkness impenetrable covers the earth. The night is long, the world seems infested with demons. Saturday, the temple worship of the great Passover Feast is at hand. Two millions of people strangely wander about and ask where is God? The day is damp and chilly, lonely and heavy, a strange gloom hangs overhead. Clouds roll across the sky. The priests are at their posts, but where is God? The world is strangely empty, worship a barren form. The universe of human kind is like a tomb. The light of the world has gone out. The longest day wears on to a close, and night again gathers the human race in its arms for rest. A little company hopes for day and with its first ray of light, as it streams over Judea’s hills, after a night of prayers and sobs, time wore on to a morning. To Joseph’s sepulchre the company hastens and who will roll away the stone? Will the soldiers grant permission to complete the embalming? The birds are singing. Light kisses the hill tops, a light more wonderful than the morning sun. All nature rejoices, the trees, flowers, earth and sky have a message. The keepers of the great stone vault are as dead men, the door is wide open and an angel announces, “He is Risen.” So the world has the Easter Day, a living King and man has Immortality.

Later on, sometime this summer, we shall expect some great fish stories.

Rev. Hulme has it all figured out. The men think so much of their wives that they (the men) stay home on Sunday morning so as to prepare Sunday dinner and allow their wives to attend Bible school and church.

Why is church membership the better way of living a christian
Rev. Hulme in his three minute talk last Sunday reminded us how the coals of a fire when scattered cooled off and stopped burning, whereas if they were all together a good fire resulted. Hence—we may therefore reason that together we can accomplish a great deal more.

"Will a man rob God." Mal. 3:8. This was the text of Rev. Hulme's sermon last Sunday, and, in discussing the sermon afterwards several men agreed it was one of the best sermons that they had ever heard. Our own opinion is that most of us are guilty of robbing God and that many of our troubles are due to robbing God in one way or another.

The bell will be rung first at 6:30 to call worshippers to early prayer meeting and again in time for regular service. I am privileged to ring it because my
