MINISTER'S COLUMN

Now, my boy, do you like your dog, or did you find a boy that didn't like a dog? Those who observe the traits of our animal friends are loud in their praise of the dog. Some of the more intelligent ones seem almost human. No wonder the dog is labeled humanity's best friend. I have been much interested in noting the comfort that lonely people find in a friendly, faithful dog. Before me in thought is an old man, all alone in the world, far along in the seventies, works every day, and in a corner near the work bench snug in a box of rags is a little, curly mongrel dog. Now money couldn't buy that little dog. It doesn't look to be worth a dime, the average man wouldn't be bothered with it, but to this old man the doggie is a pal, it is company, it's the old man's best friend. This week as I clipped along the Copley road and just as we neared the city limits coming into Akron, my friends, Mr. Charles Hine, said to me, "It was there, where the ^Teen-house now stands, on that farm. Well, they had a dog, and a hired man. It was in harvest, and the hired man was in the field with the mowing machine and the dog followed playing and running after field mice, when suddenly there was a pitiful yelp. The machine was stopped and the driver pulled the unfortunate dog from the cutting bars. Poor animal had lost one leg, another was badly mangled. The man decided the poor creature was too badly maimed to be saved, so he took the wrench from the tool box of the mowing machine and struck the dog over the head to relieve it of its misery. Then he dragged it to one side where it was easy to make a grave with his hands in the loose black soil. Here he dropped the bleeding dog and covered it over with the cool black loam. As the dinner bell tolled the hired man unhitched the weary team and told the story of the unfortunate dog and how he buried it. "Oh, my," the farmer's wife exclaimed. "What will John say when he comes home. He will be terribly upset, for he thought so much of his dog." You tell him, urged the hired man. I am not to blame and perhaps it will be easier if you explain the episode. And so the wife tells her husband how the dog was killed and buried. So while the family sat about the dinner table, Yip, Yip, Yip, faint and weak, the farmer jumped to his feet and exclaimed, "That's my dog." And sure enough up from the grave and across the field doggie had dragged itself on two legs, there it lay exhausted in the yard. So they washed and found its wounds, put the lacerated leg in splints, cared for it as only friends could.

care for the unfortunate. The dog recovered, it lived. For several years afterward the friendly farm dog hobbled along pretty well on three legs.

ANNOUNCEMENTS
Will all folks please remember that it is our aim this Sunday to have an attendance of 200 at Bible school? If each and everyone of us who promised last Sunday to bring one other person will keep their promise, an attendance of 200 should be easy to attain.

Rev. Hulme will be back from his vacation Sunday and morning worship as usual will be resumed. Inasmuch as this is the first Sunday of the month the Lord's Supper will be observed.

For the past few months it has been the custom on the first Sunday of each month to take a special collection. Please remember this and bring a ten dollar bill, or less as an offering.

The second Sunday evening in August the Bible School Orchestra and assisting artists will put on their second special musical program. You can depend on it that this musical will be well worth your time. You are invited to attend.

IN RETROSPECT
There was good attendance at our picnic last Saturday, Mr. Osman says about 170, but on Sunday there was a decided drop in Bible School attendance. Don't let your picnics interfere with your Bible school and "church going." Mr. Osman as chairman of the picnic committee wishes to thank the following members of that committee for their support in making our picnic a success. They are as follows: Mrs. Cross, Mrs. Osman, Mrs. Olson, Betty Cross, Eloise Zirkle, John Stahl, Ed. Sanner, William Schaffer, H. J. Stockman.

As a matter of history it is decidedly important (?) that the winners of the various athletic

First prize in peanut scramble, Jimmy Mincks; three legged race, Wayne Mowery and Harry Osman, Jr.; balloon race, Lyndell Birch; clothespin race by woman, Esther Shakespeare; tug of war, Mr. Cross and assistants; sack race, Jack Olson; shoe race, Jimmy Mincks; balloon busting, June Mowery; and nail driving contest, Eleise Zirkle (two nails in 8 seconds.)

MISTAKES
On the whole the uninformed or casual reader would not notice any great number of errors in last week's issue of the paper. However, three errors have been called to our attention, and we will now tell you about them.

Erratum No. 1—Mr. and Mrs. Sheka of Hudson road attended a reunion at Loudonville instead of Darrowville.

Erratum No. 2—Miss Dixie Lee Harper celebrated her sixth birthday on July 19th in place of visiting in Newcomerstown, Pa., over the weekend. It was the Haartje family who spent the weekend at Newcomerstown.

Erratum No. 3—In the last paragraph in the article entitled "Our Personal Opinion," either the printer or the linotype operator condensed the paragraph to approximately one-fourth of its original length. Presumably most everyone has forgotten all about it by this time, but in case anyone still wonders what the connection might be between Sunday blue laws and a hypocritical editor, we advise you to see the editor personally.
