MINISTER’S COLUMN

Let us remember that at the time of our story the Iriquois Indians occupied the territory along Lake Erie beginning near the site of Sandusky and on to Buffalo, N. Y. while the Eries hunting ground was along the Cuyahoga, the Portage Lakes and to the Ohio River. What is now Summit county was in the heart of the Erie’s lands and villages, this in 1655.

Pursuant to the challenge of the Erie chief to the victor of the ball game, the Iriquois agreed to match ten of their young men against ten of the Eries in a foot race. The whole company of contesting Indians were at this point invited to visit the village of the Kaw-Kaws, resided along the Eight Mile Creek, probably fifteen miles from the scene of the ball game. This the entire company agreed to do and here the following day the foot race was to be run. It creates some interest when one outstanding runner is pitted against another. It spells more, however, when one college selects a runner to try for honors in the race against another college, especially if it be an old rival. The race of these Indians was intensified many times because of the ball game, plus smouldering feelings of an unfriendly kind, plus a grim desperate determination to conquer or kill. It’s a tense moment when the two teams of our red natives muster every ounce of energy of their wild athletic natures for the race. The Eries must win, honor is at stake, win they must else humility as the challengers to the contest will smother them. The field is cleared, the runners are in line, the marshalls of the day’s sport are chosen, it’s a fair test of strength, endurance, of skill. They are off, what a sight it is, neck and neck they speed to a given mark, previously agreed to, thence back to the starting point. On they come, a thousand years of sprinting by ancestry long since dust is this day in evidence. So intent, so unconscious of friend or foe, every man is blind to his neighbor, and runs as though he must break the record of anyone who ran before him. Twenty brawny forms, ten of the Eries, ten of the Iriquois, urged as it were by demons, each thirsty for the mastery. A mile has been the distance, the time only minutes, excitement knows no bounds, it is over, the Iriquois have won. And now the Erie chief steps forward, silences the multitude and demands one more test. “We make our last challenge,” says he, “tomorrow let ten Iriquois be matched with ten Eries in a wrestling bout, each victor to tomahawk his victim on the spot.” To this third and gruesome challenge of the Erie chief the Iriquois consent, and the next day is chosen for the test of ten men of one family who must face ten men of an-

Mr. H. J. Stockman

Dear Sir:

I don't know whether or not you found anything in my previous letter you could use, but will take a chance on a second attempt.

We are finishing our vacation with a few days fishing here in northern Wisconsin. This vicinity has everything one could desire in a camp site, beautiful forests, clean waters, good bathing beaches, excellent fishing and a few mosquitoes to keep one reminded of the fact that he is still on earth. Well, to get back to Salt Lake City: We stayed there about one day, shopping and visiting around, attended an organ recital in the Mormon tabernacle, which is put on every day at noon for tourists. Also went to the Mormon Museum there which contains some interesting exhibits of the western migration and early life there of the Mormons. Their buildings are quite impressive, the Temple and adjacent buildings covering ten acres of ground near the center of the city.

We went across the Great Salt desert in the afternoon, were told at Salt Lake City that we would reach the salt beds 60 miles west of the city, but after going that distance and not seeing any salt we went on 55 miles farther or about 60 miles at the speedway and the stretch of road across the salt which is reputed to be the fastest road in the world. There is a road scraper there with which the salt is scraped up and sold for commercial purposes.

Across that desert are some of the longest and straightest stretches of road I ever expect to see. I felt very thankful that the old Hudson motor did not fail along the way as it would be a long, long walk back.

Went north through Ogden and Idaho Falls to Yellowstone Park which we entered from the west through Montana. Space will not permit much description of the park, however it has everything...

that has ever been written about it. For a distance of about twenty five miles there is a continuation of steaming geysers and hot springs. The Yellowstone river canyon is very beautiful, it is about 750 feet deep with steep walls of various colored rock. There are two falls in the river, one 122 feet high, the other 308 feet. The water roars over the highest one with about as much noise as Niagara Falls. The days here were very pleasant, but the nights were cool. There was a light frost the first night we were there.

We left the park through the east gateway and into the Shoshone National Forest. The highway follows the Shoshone river gradually getting deeper into the canyon. The scenery through here is very fine. Near Cody there are seven tunnels through which the road passes. They vary in length from 50 feet to about 500 feet, cut through the solid rock of the canyon. Crossing the Big Horn Mts. about the middle of the state of Wyoming was quite scenic also.

In fact we found many places somewhat off the beaten trails to be just as interesting as the more highly advertised places. The Devil's tower in Eastern Wyoming is an amazing sight. It is a solid shaft of granite rising eight hundred feet higher than the surrounding land. I am finishing this sitting in the car with very inefficient light so you may find it somewhat hard to read.

P. S. Remember to keep Sunday evening September 8th an open date—this is important.
