THE STONES

Stones are indeed very serviceable, were it not for them we might sink knee deep in the earth, they form the solidity for our planet. Stones are used for under-pinning of houses, foundations for great land-marks, sidewalks, highways, fences. Dear, dear, what would the old world be without stones?

Now, I read in a book, that is greatly respected, of a heap of stones piled neatly in order along the Jordan River marking the place where the Hebrew race crossed on their sojourn to the homeland. Now they were advised that when generations to follow would ask, what meaneth these stones? they would be told the story of how Providence passed them through the swirling Jordan on dry land.

Howbeit, there are so many wonderful stories about stone, such as the great stones of the Temple, the Pyramids of Egypt, Dianna of the Ephesians and the Washington Monument, five hundred 55 feet high. No doubt my readers will all agree that these are wonderful achievements in stone.

However, Stow, Ohio, is not a place to be outdone. Howe's history tells us of a great stone bed, a mighty mat of rock just back of the Post Office, where a nest of snakes so numerous as to be worthy of mention in the history of the great state of Ohio. Yet more strange than all these tales are some neatly painted stones that appear near a public parking place. I am told they are methodically arranged, apparently to warn off trespassers who persist in leaving their vehicles along the public highway while they tarry in the House of Prayer.

One cannot always be sure of things they see and hear in this strange life of ours. Now I am told of a large, bright star that has suddenly appeared in the heavens, I am told of undeclared wars and great labor troubles and hungry folks in a land where there is too much to eat. So evidently one ought to ponder deeply and seriously when a strange phenomenon in the form of painted stones appears along the highway.

Many times I have drawn up to the side of the road and read from a tablet or finger post weird and interesting history of Indians, or early settlers, or a birth place of some great massacre, or cyclone, or a battle, or a birth place of some great hero.

Now, Stow is second to none in evidence of interesting tales. On this ancient highway there was once a Tavern at Stow and a stage coach passed through and this was the Indian Trail to Old Portage, Sandusky and Detroit.

Come, then, ye wise and learned ones, and tell the youth of Stow the mystery and puzzle of the stones.

Should I Fill My Coal Bin --
This Summer?

Our advice is—fill up if possible, but at least get in some col during the summer months.
There will be another serious shortage of lump coal unless the wheels of industry turn much faster than at pres-et. Industry uses the bulk of the slack product (which is about 50% of all the coal mined).
Coal prices will increase materially—an inevitable result of readjusted wage scales, taxes and social burdens.
Buy coal now—before the winter prices go in effect and before the first cold snap creates a demand which the industry will be unable to supply.
We can fill your bin now with a good Ohio coal from seams No. 6-7-8, 5-in. lump, egg or stoker sizes at the bottom price. Or place your order for Kentucky or Splint which we will be able to fill very shortly.
