BE A GENTLEMAN

To be a gentleman is to climb the rugged steeps, pull one's self over difficulties, to endure hardships with a smile, to keep in tune with the infinite, to know sincere solicitude for every human soul. If kind hands carve on your tombstone the epitaph, "He was a gentleman," all your friends will know that one of the highest honors possible for any group to pay to a human being has been paid to you. A Gentleman, that is it, A Gentleman.

A gentleman is one well bred, polite, kind, considerate of others honorable and just in dealings, above reproach, unselfish. He can be none other than God's own, whether he be in the Church or without.

In Cor. 4:5 you will find the definition of a gentleman. A gentleman suffers long, and is kind, envieth not, vaunteth not himself, and is not puffed up, does not behave himself unseemly, seeketh not his own, is not easily provoked, and thinketh no evil. These are the elements that make a gentleman, as a man possesses them, be he a digger in the ditch or a Congressman, he is a gentleman.

One of the greatest tributes paid to George Washington is, that he was a gentleman. He was called The Father Of His Country, but it was greater to be called a gentleman. He was America's first President, but above that, under it, and surrounding it, George Washington was a gentleman. He had patience in the tur-} moil of war, when troubled on every side men could turn to him as a rock. He is not charged with one single mean or vicious act. No, he was a gentleman.

Even so was Lincoln. He, too, rode through the rapids of a war-torn Country, beset on every side with trouble, with complaints, with difficulties, with enemies, and amidst the thickest of the storm he raised his voice and called aloud, with charity for all and with malice to none. Lincoln was immortal for he was a gentleman.

When David Livingstone left his parents' home in England and sailed for exploration and missionary work in, the then dark, Africa he put his finger on a Bible text, under-scored it before the good folks knelt in prayer. Livingstone said, it is the word of a gentleman, of the most strict and sacred honour, so there's an end of it. On this Scripture he staked his future, his plans, his fortune and his life. This was Livingstone's favorite text, it is found in the last words of Jesus, recorded in Matthew 28th chapter and the last verse, it reads, And lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Livinstone wrote in his journal sixteen years later, on his death bed, surrounded by savages and far, far from home. He wrote, I put my finger again on this scripture for it is the word of a gentleman of the most strict and sacred honour, that is all.

It is beautiful to read about Jesus, He stirred the world for all time to come and in every act and deed he displayed that one noble quality. He was a gentleman.

You will never be great unless you are first a gentleman and whoever ceases to be a gentleman must inevitably fall from greatness. The real center or crux of my thought is, that whatsoever will may be a gentleman. No one so low, or poor, or even despised but that he can be a gentleman. A true jewel will glitter anywhere.

If kind Providence provides a special comfort for worthy souls in the life that is to be it will surely be for them who plod along the weary march, but are labeled with the word, Gentleman.

The great or the small, the rich or the poor, the dead, the living, or they who will possess the earth when we have one all will have added to human joy, all will have left the world better than they found it, if only they be gentlemen.

Geo. M. Hulme.

SERMON

Rev. Hulme last Sunday morning chose to read the story of Zacchaeus as recorded in the nineteenth chapter of Luke. For a text he took the tenth verse, namely, "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost."

Rev. Hulme presented this as the greatest mission of Jesus in his ministry here on earth; even greater than the atonement, for the atonement was the means to the end (God's plan) that sinners might be saved—or in other words redeemed from sin.

Several ways in which a person might be lost were mentioned. For instance one might be lost in fear, lost in doubt, lost in hate, lost in self respect, lost in uselessness to society, church, or lost in SIN. Furthermore there are members of Community Church who are lost.

It is not the will of our Heavenly Father that any should be lost. It is to this end that we have our Bible Schools and churches and we might editorially suggest our prayer meetings.

Rev. Hulme announced his resolve to do more in the way of getting out and seeking the lost to the end that they might be saved.

YOUR STREET AND MINE
IN THIS CASE
ALLEN ROAD

Last Saturday was a real spring day; just a little cool in the shade or wind, but nice and warm in any sunny protected spot. All in all it was a first rate day for a trip in the country. Of course we live in the country, and have three acres that demand attention (and do not get it) but one likes to see other country. So—about one P. M. after delivering one-third of our living offspring to the tender (?) instruction of his music teacher (A. J. K.) Allen Road—third named street in the Stow Directory occupied some of our time. In case you don't know Allen Road, to get there from the more thickly populated section of Stow Township you drive, out West Graham Road to Hudson Drive, turn right and continue in a north and easterly direction for slightly over a mile, where a three way junction appears. From this place Allen Road, approximately a mile and a half long, runs north from Hudson Drive to Seasons Road. Generally speaking it is in the north west corner of the township.

First stop one hundred and fifty yards up the road going north was at the large farm home of B. K. Friedman. A picket fence extends across the front of the yard. Large barns, and a sizeable apple orchard are there, all showing their age. From a point near at hand, if you look close to the west through the now leafless trees you can see Wyoga Lake.

As we drove up in the yard an elderly lady appeared at the back door. It was Mrs. Friedman. She, with her husband after an absence of some three or four seasons returned to this their farm home about one month ago. During this absence Mr. Friedman according to his wife had been engaged in the saloon business in Akron. He recently sold out and expects to help in celery raising in one of the muck farms back of their place. Mrs. Friedman who apparently is a hard working woman, works also on the land. With seven bedrooms in the house she expects a group of other workers soon, who will help in the “muck” farming.

Mrs. Friedman has one son and three grandchildren living in Cleveland. A Hungarian by birth she attends when she has time the Hungarian Catholic Church on Grant street in Akron.

Next stop was at the twenty-eight acre farm of Ruth McGrath. Miss McGrath, until recently was for eleven years bookkeeper for the City Laundry of Akron. A resident of the Akron district for nearly twenty years, Miss McGrath has resided in her present farm home for the past six years. A native of Mercer County, Pa., she is of Pennsylvania Dutch and Irish descent. She was raised in the Reformed Church and at present is a member of the North Hill United Presbyterian Church. Before moving to Stow she taught the Ladies Bible Class there for thirteen years, besides holding numerous other church offices. Since living in Stow, like many other Stowites her church activities have been much less.

At present Miss McGrath is interested in raising ducks. Possibly you noted her ad in this paper the past three weeks advising you that she had White Pekin Duck eggs for setting purposes. At local hatcheries she now has some four hundred duck eggs in the process of incubation. This should mean that in a few months whenever you need a duck Miss McGrath will be able to supply one. She sells them now at 25c a pound live weight, dressing them free, which in our opinion, is quite an item (have you ever tried to dress a duck?). Duck eggs for eating are also available. We bought a dozen and found them quite the same as hen eggs except much larger. Incidentally they made a very good dish of baked eggs for Sunday dinner. (See one of last week’s recipes).

On this particular Saturday afternoon no one was at home at the next two houses.

Further along as you come up over the hill, if you have not been out Allen Road for a couple of years or so, you are surprised to see a new made body of water, probably ten or twelve acres in size extending on both sides of the road, and—an extra large new fine looking brick structure overlooking this lake.

Seeing three men planting hundreds of tiny evergreens on the hillside next to the lake we approached and asked for the boss. Mr. A. L. Conder who proved to be the owner spoke up and inquired if it was our desire to buy. Such was the opening of an hour’s interesting visit.

This property, some one hundred and fifty seven acres is the old Allen place, though Mr. Conder has been the owner for some years past.

The lake was made by constructing a dam across the flow of water from several springs. Last year it was stocked with eighteen hundred blue gills who will no doubt spawn this year. Four thousand more fish are also to be placed in the lake soon.

Coming to the house Mr. Conder explained that his family occupied the first floor while the upstairs portion was divided into two apartments occupied respec-

Incidentally Mr. Conder is a machinist working for the Gouger Machine Company in Kent. He must be also something of a real estate promoter as he mentioned owning an allotment.

To return to the house, the most impressive feature is the large sun room, size 20x32 ft. It faces the west and the lake. Also in the living room is a large stone fireplace with a slab of Indiana slate for a mantle board.

In the basement we find a four car garage with latest type overhead doors, also a recreation room, size 16x42, also a laundry room, fruit cellar (to be) and furnace room with a large Wise air-conditioned furnace. Outside and to the north Mr. Conder expects to construct a coal storage that will hold a full carload of coal. Connecting with the furnace he will have a screw conveyor from the coal bin—also an automatic stoker.

Much more could be written about this place but sufficient to say Mr. Conder does much of the work himself and apparently if he does not sell, there is enough to last a lifetime. He and his family are of the Roman Catholic faith, attending St. Peters in Akron when work permits, though at present work does not permit.

Other people who live on this road will be visited by your reporter when time permits.

FRUIT SALAD
1 can pineapple
4 oranges
8 bananas
12 marshmallows

Dressing: Juice of one orange, juice of one elmon, ¾ cup pineapple juice, two egg yolks, 2 tbsp. cornstarch, ½ cup sugar, ¾ tsp. salt. Cook until clear. When cold add diced fruit and then marshmallows.

“Gambling is a rootlet of avarice—or the love of money.”

CHRISTIANITY

We hear quite a bit of discussion about what a Christian should do to show his Christianity; what he should do for his fellow-man, now that he is a church member. From general observance, it would seem that church members are advised to have more church suppers or less church suppers, to battle with the liquor problem, to snub all bad people and be nice to the respectable ones and to help the worthy poor. Just belonging to church organizations and going to church, each Sunday, seems enough to get some through the pearly gates. Some thinking people feel that it is such a long time to wait for heaven to relieve them of the awful burden of being good. We never can agree on what is good anyway, so maybe we will not like the good people in heaven.

There is a statement in the Bible which might be a help to us. It is quoted often but never explained and means practically nothing to us. The statement is, “Seek ye first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." I believe that most of us honestly wish that we knew how to seek the kingdom of God; what the kingdom of God is; and how we might do something here, which would give us the joy, that is sung about in hymns and yelled about by revivalists (but seldom expressed on their faces).

Emerson, who is accredited with being our wisest American says that the attributes of God are love, justice, humility and aspiration. Henry Drummond says, love is enough for it covers all other qualities. We are so inclined to think of love as a personal love; a quality we extend here to these nice people but withdraw there from the unworthy, the drunken and the ignorant. Since it is so difficult to separate love from our personal desires and inclinations, we might consider the other attributes mentioned above.

Justice. But there can be no justice without unselfed love—a kindly tolerance toward persons and circumstances. It seems most difficult for church members to be just to those outside the church or for a mother to be just to her children. Church members think they are pleasing God by ridiculing the outsiders foolishness or condemning his sins. Certainly it is unwise to condone an act, which we know is harmful to society in general, but it is unfair to condemn the act, unless we understand the cause and are ready to help remedy it. A mother does, as she desires with her children, and expects love and gratitude from them, because of her sacrifices. If her love could be less possessive, unselfed love,—she could give her children freedom to develop the talent God gave them. They, alone, can develop this talent and too few people realize the havoc, that is wrought in lives, by the repression of this instinct. We are all conforming to a certain pattern, rebelling against circumstances and hating people, because we are not being our real selves—not expressing the Divinity within us.

In humility, we have, again, a kindly tolerance toward persons and circumstances. So often the weeping, apologizing, door-mat type is spoken of, as meek. The word, in this case, is weak, not meek. Says Ogden Nash, "Sometimes with secret pride, I sigh, to think how tolerant am I, then wonder which is really mine, tolerance, or a rubber spine."

Emerson says of humility, "By humility we rise; by obedience we command; by poverty we are rich; by dying, we live." And in another writing he says, "One avenue was shaded from thine eyes, through which I wandered to eternal truth." The avenue was humility.

Anything we could say of aspiration would bring us to the same thought. It is only by humility, by unselfed love, by our sense of justice, that we can see the beauties of nature or truly enjoy that which is worthwhile. It is only by ridding our minds of trash, that we can admit beauty, and hunting for evil in others, is the prevailing form of trash, with which, our minds are burdened.

So it seems we, church members, do nothing to others. We do our Christian work on ourselves and, with diligence, we arrive at the place, where we, by the absence of a sense of unworthiness in ourselves, call forth the very best that is in our fellow man, when we chance to meet him. Possibly this is not goodness, as it is usually understood, but a self-understanding and a realization that in understanding one’s self, an understanding of all others is effected, for the same rule applies to all.

Again Emerson says, "We owe to man, higher succors than food and fire. We owe to man, man. If he is sick, is unable, is mean spirited and odious, it is because so much of his nature is withheld from him. He should be visited in this, his prison, with rebuke to the evil demons, with manly encouragement, with no mean-spirited offer of condolence because you have not money or of money as the utmost benefit but by your heroism, your purity, and your faith. You are to bring with you that spirit, which is understanding, health and self help."
