DISREGARD

That is it, my brother, disregard, that is the road that leads to destruction and many are the travelers that pass that way. Disregard for God, does that get your number? In times like these when the children of men are boastful of their carelessness and indifference to the old landmarks, be careful that you are not possessed of a disregard for the God of your fathers. Disregard for God, for the Book, is a sort of a latter day epidemic. It is nothing to be proud of, it has no ear-marks of super knowledge, it is born of evil and the end thereof is death.

If there were no God then man certainly ought to make a god so as to have something standard to tie to. To acknowledge no sovereign deity is to have neither pilot or rudder, and be on a stormy sea driven and tossed and know not what the end will be.

One is a fool to disregard the will of God, such as the written word, the known facts and the time honored finger posts. Get on the old trail, my brother, walk in the narrow way, and quit this Sunday insult of passing up God's House.

Disregard of Law, that is a fellow traveller that invariably falls in with Mr. Disregard of God. They are two of a kind. Disregard of Law waits beyond the end in the road for his bandit friend, Disregard of God. So, reinforced they go it together on the broad highway whose slope is always down.

When one disregards God he has let go of the strongest restraint that man has ever known. God is man's king-bolt, or the main cable that supports all lesser ones. When one lets go of God then Law is an offence, something to be cast aside whenever convenience requires.

The disregard of law is the second mile in the direction of the rapids. Law is made for the well being of all men, but when God is removed then man hates law, for law denies him of his evil designs.

So it is when Disregard of God and Disregard of Law become fellow travellers they soon fall in with Disregard of Human Rights, and the three walk together, for they have much in common, they speak the same language and they always travel in the same direction that is down.

Many sob in the old world tonight because they have been robbed of their rights, of their inalienable rights, of their rights of life and home and church and school and work and future, all gone. Gone because some one disregarded the high and holy laws of God. They sneered at that old timey stuff, they cut loose from prayer, and song, and worship and church. They cast it out as obsolete and useless. And law, a fence between them and their desire, so down goes the fence, for pray, who has the right to make law to govern another and human rights? That alone is reserved for the lords of the earth not for the common folk or the poor or weak or sick or underprivileged.

My friend, be not among them who disregard God, Law, and Human Rights. For all things eventually are tested and the day shall declare them and if they be found wanting it is the end, for there is no recourse.

BIBLE STUDY LESSON
May 25

Golden Text—And Peter opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons. Acts 10:34.

We find in the text for this lesson that God uses both human agents and supernatural revelations to bring a soul to believe in Jesus.

Cornelius was a Roman officer who turned from heathen practices to the Jewish worship of one God. He attended services and studied the Old Testament, and his searching after God was rewarded by a direct vision as he was praying, telling him to find Peter who could tell him and his friends how to be saved. God speaks to those who persist in their search for him.

Peter also had a vision of a sheet let down from heaven filled with beasts and fowls such as Moses had commanded should not be eaten. A voice came to him urging him to kill these animals and eat them, which Peter felt should not be done.

This vision was designed to teach Peter that all men were equally precious in the sight of God regardless of their different races and customs.

Therefore when the messengers of Cornelius came asking him to go among the Gentiles, instead of clinging to his old ideas, Peter went to the friends and relatives who were gathered together eagerly waiting his message.

His father, a sister, his wife, four children and one grandchild survive. To them we extend our sincere sympathy.

THE CULT OF LOAVES AND FISHES

A sad-eyed seminarian, who is studying for the ministry, wrote the following after an experience with a certain church. Both wish to remain unnamed:

"Behold! The lodge lodgeth together and they eat. The club clubbeth together and they eat. The business men take counsel and they eat. The church hath a social and they eat. The young people elect officers and they eat. And even when the missionary society meeteth together they eat. But this latter is in good cause, because they 'eat in remembrance' of the poor heathen who hath not to eat.

"Behold! Hath man's brains gone to his stomach and doth he no longer regard intellectual dainties that thou canst no longer call an assembly or get together a quorum or even a 'baker's dozen' except thou hold up the baker's dainties as a bait? Be it true, that the day cometh that to get a crowd at prayer meeting the preacher must hold up a biscuit?

"Yea, verily, thou hast heard of the child races of the world. But, behold, it is nigh thee even at the door. For as one calleth unto the child and saith, 'Come hither sweet little one, and I will give thee a stick of candy;' even so must thou say to his grown-up papa and mama, 'Assemble ye together and we will serve refreshments.' And lo, they come like sheep into a pen. Selah."—The Outlook.

LETTER

This Monday we received a letter from our friends at Fish Creek. Evidently the articles by Mr. Mitten and Frank Green aroused sufficient interest in the writer to pay a visit to the gorge, or as Mr. Green corrects, the gulf. We print only a portion of the letter. Is is as follows:

The recent write ups about "The Gulf" were extra interesting, especially, to one who has spent many indescribably wonderful moments there.

How many have ever been in "The Gulf" at six in the morning?

To go there alone and hear the exquisite music of thrush, warblers and other song birds as they awake to a new day; to see the early morning sun light and the shadows through the trees, against the rocks, with reflections in the babbling brook; to smell all the woody odors; to be able to revel in the beauty of spring flowers, all makes one feel reassured "God is in His Heavens, all's right with the world" and how refreshing to get that full assurance in these war wracked or war wrecked times.

Eventide would probably be equally entrancing in The Gulf with birds singing their evening lullabies, a beautiful vesper service in any woodsland at the setting of the sun as dusk softens the light of day preparing us for nights darkness.

Ah! Yes. The Gulf does hold enchantment and lest one grow poetic, let's become very practical and comment on the dangers of quick-sand. Won't those who know its whereabouts please mark its treacherous place or places to protect those unaware of its nearness?

In making an annual early May trip to the Stow cemetery we found our good friend, Frank Green, and his assistants had everything in tip top shape. They surely deserve highest commendation for the fine work they do there, not only just now but the whole year round.

Mr. Green, because of his deep personal interests in Stow and all the inhabitants thereof makes everyone feel their sorrow in the loss of a loved one is his sorrow too and his sincere concern that even the minutest detail is of greatest importance in every burial and the attention given afterwards to our final resting place; leaves the real comforting feeling that the departed have been left with one who cares.

There is a quotation that, "Praise, like gold and diamonds, owes its value only to its scarcity," but after all Stow and surrounding communities can well be proud of the well kept older part of the cemetery with its nicely arranged newer additions. The term "Sexton" use to be used to designate the one who was in charge of a cemetery (God's Acres), if that word is still permissible again we say "Hats Off" to Sexton Frank Green and hats off to his assistants.
